Girls Dominate Georgia Class

To the editors:

Athena, Ga., June 3—Concluding for the University of Georgia this year another year of co-education at the University of Georgia, the third year for which the female student body has been admitted to the professional junior senior class in the history of the school will bear a valuable distinction as the first co-educational class to receive its degree at a-lysted family in the country.

Miss Augusta Neel, of Atlanta, is the first woman valedictorian to come to Georgia since the school adopted the co-educational plan, and she has the honor of being the first woman to receive a degree in a regular class at the University of Georgia.

EXERCISES CUT

Commencement activities which will continue until Thursday will be cut to a minimum on Saturday when the valedictorian will give her speech. The last day of classes will be May 25, and the ceremony will be held on May 26.

The University of Georgia has been co-educational for the last three years, and the number of women students has steadily increased. The number of women attending the University of Georgia last year was 109, or 21 per cent of the total student body. This year, the number of women students is expected to exceed 200, or 25 per cent of the total student body.

The University of Georgia has also made great strides in the field of women's athletics. The university has established women's teams in basketball, softball, and volleyball, and the women's teams have won several championships in recent years.

The University of Georgia has been a leader in the field of education for women, and the university's curriculum has been designed to meet the needs of women in society. The university's faculty has also been active in promoting women's rights, and the university has been a leader in the fight for equal rights for women.
