The College of Family and Consumer Sciences can trace its origins back to February 1918, when a Bachelor of Science degree in the Division of Home Economics within the UGA College of Agriculture was made available to women.

At the FACS 100 Gala: A Centennial Celebration, we will celebrate members of the Honor Hall of Recognition and recognize the FACS 100 Centennial Honorees, individuals who have brought strength, conviction and commitment to the ideals of the profession and through vision and hard work helped to shape our programs.

I hope you can join us for a memorable evening celebrating the rich history and exciting future of the College of Family and Consumer Sciences.

Linda Kirk Fox, Dean
