Condemnation vs Eminent Domain

• It is also the legal process by which a governmental body exercises its right of "eminent domain" to acquire private property for public uses, such as redevelopment or highways.
Condemnation vs Eminent Domain

• Eminent domain is the government's right to acquire private property for public use.
Condemnation vs Eminent Domain

• The exercise of eminent domain always results in a “condemnation”, but a “condemnation” is not always the exercise of the power of eminent domain.
Condemnation vs Eminent Domain

• The exercise of eminent domain always results in a “condemnation”, but a “condemnation is not always the exercise of the power of eminent domain.

• Just what government actions constitute a “taking” of property, are the subject of much litigation and commentary.
“Regulation” vs “Confiscation”
“Regulation” vs “Confiscation”

• The general rule is that the application of legitimate regulatory powers; zoning, building codes, fire and life safety codes, etc.; are not “takings” within the meaning of the Constitution.
“Regulation” vs “Confiscation”

• The general rule is that the application of legitimate regulatory powers; zoning, building codes, fire and life safety codes, etc.; are not “takings” within the meaning of the Constitution.

• Except where such application rises to the level of being “confiscatory”, meaning that it rises to such a level as to substantially diminish the property’s economic value.

§ 22-1-2. Nature of right of eminent domain; property to be put to public use

• § 22-1-2. Nature of right of eminent domain; property to be put to public use

(a) The right of eminent domain is the right of the state, through its regular organization, to reassert, either temporarily or permanently, its dominion over any portion of the soil of the state on account of public exigency and for the public good.
