

Internships: A Programmatic Summary 2005-2009

...HACE IS THE PLACE!

Spring 2009

My HACE Internship Experience

During a recent dinner with friends of my parents, the conversation turned bemusedly to what my postgraduate plans were and what I was going to do with my dual majors in Housing and Consumer Economics. As I embarrassingly explained my lack of desire to actualize the next 20 years of my life before the end of my sophomore year of college, I began speaking about the internship as a Pharmacy Technician that I was currently participating in thanks to my involvement with the college of Family and Consumer Sciences.

“Pharmacy is America’s most trusted profession” is a quote that has been used to describe the public’s view of a pharmacist for many years. Any professional involved in pharmacy has witnessed the impact of that statement on patients who depend on their pharmacy for their most critical needs. Patients trust that the individuals behind the pharmacy counter are skilled, competent, and ready to assist them with confidence. Throughout the course of my internship I have learned a great deal more than I ever could have imagined and I have been entrusted with infinitely more responsibility than I ever could have imagined.

My internship was an amazing opportunity for me to gain insight into an area and into a profession which I was interested, as well as combining a place where my strengths and passions could intertwine to add value to the organization. Beyond working with 15 of the most wonderful alumni and graduates from the University, it's the humble pride and pleasure that comes with serving a gracious institution that has given me so much. In turn, I could only offer a fraction of my gratitude through service-- but I did it with ALL of me. Representing HACE is humility, friendship, appreciation, and Georgia Pride. I can't believe I've been so lucky as to be a part of this wonderful college and internship program. How and why, I'll never know, but I am forever grateful.

Dear HACE Students;

This booklet has been prepared especially for you to give you examples of internship opportunities in our department. As you read this booklet you will see that the internships are varied and exciting! An internship is a unique opportunity for you to test your career interests before making a total commitment to a specific position.

Doing an internship will also give employers an opportunity to get to know you. Many former students are successfully employed because they put forth 120% effort during the internship.

As you become more familiar with various internship placements we have had over the years, you will notice that many of the field supervisors are former students. We call these legacy internships. You will find these field supervisors to be familiar with HACE and your program of study. They are more than willing to help you with your career development. These former students believe in the internship process partly because of their own experience.

Our advice to you is to select an internship that you are passionate about at this moment. You might select an internship that will help you develop skills in which you feel you are lacking. Also, even if you are not offered a position at the end of the internship, it could result in a great recommendation so do your best to earn your field supervisor's respect. Good luck.

INTERNSHIPS: A Programmatic Review

Role and Scope

In the University of Georgia Bulletin, an internship is described as “a supervised work experience.” Although that is a good shorthand designation, it cannot capture everything involved for the student in HACE 5910/7910. Within the Department of Housing and Consumer Economics (HACE), the internship is meant to be an integral part of students’ programs. Internships offer students opportunities to:

- apply subject matter learned from their course work to the work place
- develop new skills through work as an intern
- gain additional experience which will help students as they establish their own careers

Thus, an internship is neither simply a job nor just a way to gain experience. The distinguishing marks of an internship are its academic merit and the contribution it makes to the student’s program. The internship experience these students have had underscores the key role internships play in the HACE Department’s overall program. This report explains the internship program and highlights recent developments over the past year.

Patterns of Enrollment and Placement

Data on internship enrollments for the past fourteen years are provided in the table shown on page 3. Two conclusions can be drawn from the table.. First, internships have played an important and on-going role in departmental offerings and second, internships are playing an increasingly important role in students’ programs of study, especially as the number of students in HACE increases. Employers are requesting a track record of work experience of recent graduates

Detailed information on student placements during Fall 2004-2007 is given in the following pages. The diversity of activities is striking. Internships are clustered in the Athens-Atlanta area, but placements range across the state, nation and the world. It is difficult to characterize the typical internship. Although many are with small companies and family-owned businesses, internships with major corporations are also represented. This information is especially helpful for the student who would like to contact an internship site that is familiar with their program of study. These placements indicate the range of placements and provide future students with ideas for internship possibilities.
