Programming focus: Chronic Disease Prevention/Healthy Lifestyles; Positive Development for Individuals, Families, and Communities

To combat the rise of chronic disease in a rural, poverty-stricken county, the Stewart County Extension Family and Consumer Sciences agent conducts programming in the areas of diabetes prevention, healthy lifestyles and nutrition. Along with chronic disease prevention for all ages, the agent promotes healthy habits with youth in the county through in school and community events. Through innovative programming, the Family and Consumer Sciences agent meets the individual needs of Stewart County citizens while supporting the land-grant mission.
