Programming focus: Financial Capability; Food Safety and Preservation; Chronic Disease Prevention/Healthy Lifestyles

As part of Richmond County Extension, the Family and Consumer Sciences (FACS) program provides our community with a source for research-based information on a broad range of topics relevant to the well-being, daily living, and economic challenges individuals, families, and businesses face today. Education and outreach focused on increasing financial capability and economic well-being, food safety and preservation, chronic disease prevention, and healthy housing, gives citizens in the Augusta-Richmond area the knowledge and skills to improve their quality of life. By developing partnerships with local agencies, delivering programming to a wide range of audiences, and linking local residents with University of Georgia resources, we strive to UGA Extension offers educational programs, assistance and materials to all people without regard to race, color, national origin, age, gender or disability.
